Raiders Strike Off Irish Coast For 14 Hours

Stream of Distress Calls Heard: Fate of Crews Unknown.

By the Associated Press. NEW YORK, Dec. 2.-Underseas raiders struck at a convoy of merchant vessels about 500 miles west of Ireland today, torpedoing at least eight ships, while two other ships—one of them only 25 miles from Ireland-were bombed from the air.

Distress signals were heard here by Mackay radio over a 14-hour period until silence veiled the convoy's fate. At least one ship was sunk, as indicated by the presence of survivors aboard another torpedoed vessel.

Then at 2:37 o'clock this afternoon a distress signal from another vessel, the tenth of the day, was heard by Mackay. The 4,360ton British freighter W. Hendrik said she had been "torpedoed at latitude 55 north, longitude 15.40 west.'

TIMES A-WASTIN'-Here it is night coming on and no fire lit in the stove and Clyde Odell Brown, of near Franklin, Ga., in Heard county, has got to go off to soldier for Uncle Sam in the morning. The 25-year-old farmer swings a double-bitted ax as he gets the chores done for the last time before becoming the first man in the Fourth Corps Area to go in under selective service.

LAST TASK-Last farm duties for Clyde Brown were to shuck a few ears of corn for Kate and Tom, the brown team with which he has helped make many a crop. Today the big-wigs of the army will be wining him and dining him, honoring Heard county for having more men, per capita, volunteer after the draft than any other county in the eight states of the Corps Area.

An hour later this roseate dream existence will pop like a soap bubble and Clyde Odell Brown, of Heard county, will be out at Fort McPherson going through the fiformalities that make him a soldier. He may be peeling pota-toes before the week is out.

Assuredly he will be subjected to the fatigue of carrying a pack and a rifle that makes a tender shoulder hurt. The brass-hats with whom he will have hob-nobbed on his last day of freedom he will address respectfully as "sir" and he will stand at attention in their presence until they tell him to be at ease. There will be no silk sheets on his bed and nobody will wake him up to serve him his breakfast. He'll get up when the bugle blows or he'll go

10 Opportunity Fund Bolsters Families With Will To Fight

By FRANK DRAKE.

How do needy families get to be Opportunity families? Who are the Opportunity families and where do they come from? Why should I give to help a family I do not know?

These are the questions that many men and women ask every year when The Constitution, in co-operation with the Family Welfare Society, begins presenting the city's neediest and most deserving families to be "adopted" for a year so they will have a chance to become self-supporting again. They have the right to ask and it is our duty to answer.

These are the questions that must be faced, the battle fought and won.

Probably Mrs. Neighbor goes to her minister, or some good friend, and confides her trouble. You don't see her now, because Mrs. Neighbor had to move when her husband died, move into cheaper rooms 'o stretch her few pennies as far a possible. These are the questions that

One morning you open your newspaper and see a story that tells of the unexpected death of Mr. Neighbor. You feel sorry for Mrs. Neighbor and send flowers, maybe, but deep down, that story death doesn't touch you per-

They have the right to ask and it is our duty to answer.

Imaginary Case.

Let us take an imaginary case, for instance, but a case that is built of facts. A little later, daily stories of real, honest-to-goodness families and their heart-rending tragedies will be told, but just for today let's imagine:

Suppose you live on a nice, quiet residential street somewhere in one of the better sections of Atlanta. Next door is a family you know by sight and perhaps by name. The husband works and the wife is happy at home with

Mr. Neighbor. You feel sorry for Mrs. Neighbor and send flowers, maybe, but deep down, that story of death doesn't touch you personally. Mr. Neighbor probably left enough insurance, you think, to take care of his family. But suppose he didn't, that debts and funeral expenses and other costs eat up the insurance before this widow has had time to more than turn around.

Carpenter and Harris have made much over the approval given Glover's activities by highway board members, Herman Watson and L. L. Patten, and over the refusal of Chairman L. L. Miller to condemn them.

The government meanwhile has attempted to prove that evidence supporting the board's approval largely has been manufactured since postal inspectors began their investigations of the highway department, an investigation that has led to two other indictments against Glover, and formal charges against other board attaches. THERE aren't many wholly unselfish

"I'd like to keep them," he admitted. "But mostly I use them to harass my competitors. If I can reduce my products so we can tell the customers a still better story and perhaps move out a little ahead of the other fellows."

"Suppose you had the power to stop your competitors, to deny them the right to advertise, leaving the field to you, would you use that right?"

He thought a minute and then gave me this answer.

"No. I would be tempted to do that if I could. But I'm too greedy and, I think, too smart, to want to. My business would go to seed. So would other businesses, in my line and other lines. Pretty soon I couldn't sell my goods because there wouldn't be enough customers with good enough jobs to afford to buy my stuff. Then it wouldn't be long until I myself would have a hard time getting the new and better things I'd like to have. It wouldn't work out!"

"Then who loses when money is spent for advertising good products?" I asked.

"Damnation," he exploded. "Nobody loses. Advertising is just like a better tool. When a man buys a million dollars' worth of good tools for his factory and uses them to save his customers a couple of million and to increase his payroll another couple of million and still manages to keep out enough to buy a shirt and pay his income taxes, nobody loses."

My manufacturer friend went his way without my telling him that he had missed an important part of the benefits of using advertising as an economic tool.

You can call it your selfish part and mine. His advertising not only brings you and me news of such things as good values, but it also helps to pay the cost of gathering and publishing the news by which you and I learn the facts we must have in order to keep ourselves free.

I don't know how you feel about this particular American brand of selfishness, but I like it!

"Why do you spend money for advertising space?"

I asked him. "I don't spend money that way. I save it," he answered. "If there were any cheaper ways to tell people about my goods, I'd try them."

"Then what do you do with the savings?" I went on to inquire.

NOTE: The purpose of these regular Tuesday institutional advertisements is to make American life and American business better. In line with action recently sought by Representative Paul Brown, of Elberton, the resolution offered by Senator George in collaboration with Senator McKellar, of Tennessee, requests the cor-poration and the Department of Agriculture not to make new storage contracts. New contracts are scheduled to be made on the basis of bids received last month. Decision of the CCC was to have been made November 22, but was postponed at the request of a con-

Wallace in Mexico

The reception of Vice President-elect Henry Wallace by the government and, generally speaking, the people of Mexico, is highly gratifying. (Save for the unjustified mob scene staged by disgruntled Almazanistas in Mexico City on Thursday night.) Probably more than any incident in recent years the Wallace visit has cemented the feeling of partnership which the two countries must have if both are to advance and prosper as free lands.

Wallace very modestly has laid the fervor of the greeting to the friendship this people to the south feel for President Roosevelt. In large measure, however, it must be laid also to the personal qualities of Wallace himself. In the past few years he has devoted himself to the study of the Spanish language, and it is in their own tongue that he has been speaking to those who greeted him, peasant and poet alike. To those familiar with the usual antics of the Yangui in Latin-American countries, it is easy to see what an effect this gracious gesture has upon the people of Mexico. Wallace also is to these people an agrarian. His agricultural background naturally appeals to the people of a country which is by and large almost completely agrarian.

It cannot be gainsaid, however, that President Roosevelt and his administration have a firm hold upon the affections of the Spanishtongued peoples of Central and South America, as well as the Portuguese-speaking Brazilians. He has by his actions convinced them they have a friend in the once-feared Colossus of the North; a friend who by actions and not idle words is willing to extend a helping hand to those in need. This, unhappily, would not have been so if Willkie had become the president of the United States, for one ill-advised statement made for the sake of a handful of cattle-country votes ripped away any "good neighbor" mantle he might also have worn. That is why the re-election of President Roosevelt was greeted with such joy throughout Latin America. That is why the government of Nicaragua, which has had a taste of "Yankee imperialism," decreed a two-day holiday in honor of the President's re-election.

Wallace's reception is particularly fortunate at a time when the great unsolved question of expropriation is nearing a solution being sought in good faith by the two governments. With this problem solved it will be possible for the two countries to work in harmony, with markets in this country for Mexican products and participation of this country in the effort of the Mexican government to raise the income level of its people, which in turn will mean greatly expanded markets for this nation. More importantly, however, it will remove a potential hostile or at least non-co-operative government standing between this country and the vital Panama canal. That in itself will be of untold

It is evident already that the new vice president will fill a dynamic role in the fateful forties.

The Eyes of the Nation

The eyes of the nation are on Atlanta this week. For the annual meeting of the minor eagues of baseball will take place here. The nagnates and the managers and the officials of the leagues which are the backbone of the national sport will throng hotel lobbies. There will be heated discussions of various problems of the sport and there will be much trading in baseball "ivory" in quiet corners, here and

The minor leagues are the real foundation of baseball in the United States. The major league teams may be known to everyone, the annual World Series may focus the spotlight for one week each fall, but where is the follower of the national game, worthy the name, who would not willingly see any major team lose the pennant in its own league, rather than see the home team go down in defeat?

In every American city, or town, which coasts a professional baseball team, the maority of the population will be watching Atlanta this week. Eager to see if the manager of the local nine has found that badly needed southpaw pitcher, that hard-hitting outfielder or that second baseman capable of plugging the hole in the local infield.

The world may be trembling under blows of war, problems of politics and of diplomacy may plague the nation's leaders, but while batting averages, pitchers' records, errors and hits determine the standing of the home team, Americans all will always be better versed in baseball's statistical and personnel data, than in the caliber of heavy guns or the destructive power of aerial torpedoes.

Italy Today

Authoritative sources paint a gloomy picture, from the Axis viewpoint, of conditions in Italy today. The successes of the Greeks, coupled with the British naval domination in the Mediterranean, are having fearful psychological effect upon the Italian people.

Soon, according to all indications, the Italians are going to be forced out of Albania and Mussolini's forces will have to evacuate the Dodecanese islands. Crete is already under British occupation. British bombers are wreaking heavy toll from Italian industrial plants and munitions manufactories.

The blockade is having more telling effect in Italy than anywhere else. Without much reserve stocks when Mussolini plunged his people into a war he thought already won, there are such severe shortages of many essentials. in Italy today, that the people are suffering severely and the war machine is already badly crippled.

There is a vital shortage of gasoline, there is no cotton and many other war essentials have either gone altogether or are near the disappearing point. Italians are permitted meat only two days of the week and oils, fats and other necessities of diet have almost dis-

In the words of one informed source, there is "a demoralization in Italy which verges on revolt of the populace and some sections of the army."

If that revolt comes it will be the first great success for Britain. Britain has, heroically and almost miraculously, averted defeat time and time again. At Dunkerque and by preventing invasion of England, for instance. But those were negative achievements, merely defensive triumphs. Collapse of Italy will be a great offensive victory.

Should Italy break, and revolt come, it would mean occupation of Italy by German troops. Of course, Italy has been nothing but a captive of the Nazi war machine throughout, whether Mussolini and his Fascist leaders realized it or not. She has been, in the words of Dorothy Thompson, just the caboose on the wildly running Nazi train of revolution, unhappy, but unable to get loose.

Already the Italians are sadly regretting they ever hungered for the loot of a conquered France and, a supposed-to-be-conquered Britain. When German troops occupy their land, following the hordes of Nazi agents already planted there, their woe will be complete.

Meanwhile, Britain undoubtedly presses to the full her advantages in the Italian field of operations. Many British troops have already joined the Greek forces. Britain's navy and air force are rendering invaluable aid. Britain's commander of forces in the eastern Mediterranean, General Sir Archibald Wavell, is already in Greece helping to direct the campaign.

It seems more inevitable, day by day, that the first crack in the Axis armor will come in Italy, and before many months have passed. The more crucial question in the minds of supporters of Britain in this conflict, is, can Britain herself hold out long enough to ride to victory on the tide that is forming in the blue Mediterranean and on the snowclad slopes of Albanian mountains.

Don't pass up Page 17 of your newspaper. That's where they found the Gettsyburg address in the next day's editions, and cut it out for posterity.

Editorial Symposium HERBERT HOOVER AND STARVING EUROPE

Less than enthusiastically for the most part, the nation's editors greet former President Herbert Hoover's plan to feed the populations of German-occupied countries of Europe. Typical of one section of the press, the PORTLAND ORE-GONIAN says, "Our feeding of the victims of German aggression would only strengthen these victims to work their factories in Germany's be-We would be building guns to fire at

Pointing out that Mr. Hoover proposes that governments of occupied countries be permitted to buy American food, that German and British governments permit the shipment, that the food be distributed by American organizations, and "that the shipments stop immediately in case the Germans are found to any substantial amounts of food," the NEW YORK NEWS sees Britain getting these people's gratitude, and "If the Germans should take to stealing the food and shipments are cut off, Germany would harvest hatred and maybe rebellions and mass sabotage," with Britain holding "these peo-ple's gratitude for having done what it could."

Agreeing with the NEWS' expression is the LOS ANGELES TIMES, which feels "the British have more to gain from allowing these people to be fed than allowing them to starve." On the other hand, the PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN believes "every day that passes makes the Hoover project less possible. . . . Rationing in Britain is severe, and, according to Lord Woolton, minister of food, will become more so this winter. Under the circumstances, Britain is not likely to lift her blockade for others' benefit."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

BY JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

PROS AND CONS OF BRITAIN'S NEED WASHINGTON, of the Johnson Act will not solve the problem of financing the British war effort when Britain's cash reserves run out. The Johnson Act merely forbids the British to seek private credits in this country, and these they cannot conceivably obtain in any case. Revision of the neutrality act, to permit loans to belligerents by govcorporations, is the minimum action really required to make fresh American dollars available to Britain. The administration is far from eager to move in the matter

now. Possibly the attitude will change when the full facts of Britare placed before Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. by an emissary of the British treasury soon to arrive in Washington. For the present, however, high administration officials bristle with arguments all tending to show that the British do not need money at present, and will not need it for some time to come.

Thus there is not a shred of substance to the common assumption that the President, the State Department and the Treasury are all busily conspiring together to expunge the Johnson Act from the statute books. If they were, indeed, the problem of financing Britain's war effort would be far less puzzling. For instead of an easily understandable executive conspiracy to give Britain more aid, the problem turns on a complex controversy over the secret British war balance sheets.

THE KENNEDY PARADOX Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, peddling appeasement across the country, is using the argument that "Britain is busted" as one of the punch lines in his sales talk. It may seem a little odd, therefore, that Kennedy's opponents in the administration, the really zealous advocates of all aid to Britain short of war, should now contend that financial aid is one kind we need to give. Yet this is the contention. In support of it, three main points are made:

(1) That the British gold reserves can stand further withdrawals; (2) that the British have yet to mobilize all the American securities, dollar balances and gold reserves of their allies, such as the Dutch government in exile, and their dominions, such as Canada; and (3) that the British can still get money by liquidating their so-called direct investments, such as Lord Astor's New York real estate, the American subsidiaries of firms like the big rayon makers, Courtauld's, and the American branches of companies like Sun Insurance.

In answering these points, the emissary of the British treasury will not lack for points of his own. No one knows how far the British gold reserves have been lowered by calls from outside the United States, and reasonable reserves are obviously necessary to back the British currency and to provide the British treasury with emergency funds for the world money markets. Total mobilization assets of Britain's allies and dominions is a task that presents tremendous difficulties, both economic and political. Finally, liquidating direct investments is far less easy than selling Britishowned American securities on the stock exchange.

THE DELICATE POINT Compromise should not be difficult on points one and two. Point three is the sore one, partly because all the bad feeling accidentally aroused in the credit controversy has somehow concentrated here, and partly because the Treasury has a burning conviction that liquiof direct investments has been avoided to spare the feelings of "the Birmingham crowd," or British big business. The British negotiator has one conspicuous out, however. During the intertreasury discussions of wartime fiscal relationships in the spring of 1939, the British asked for and received assurance that this government had power to form a corporation to purchase or lend money against assets of this type. It will be hard to answer him, simply tells his American hosts, "Well, we regard these assets as frozen and don't know how to unfreeze them. But if you think you have the secret, we'd be glad to hand them over to you at their fair values."

If the British ambassador, Lord Lothian, correctly represents his government-and it is unimaginable that he does not-the British say they will soon require cash to meet payments in this country. If they are right, the cash will have to be found, unless the United States prefers to see Britain go under for want of supplies.

PREPARING FOR CHAOS So much is clear. Meanwhile, another body of opinion is also forming in the administration. Those who share it feel the treasury approach to the credit problem is unbelievably niggling. They point that, after all, Britain is fighting our battle, and that we should not tear the last pound of flesh from British ribs before agreeing to draw on our own resources. Above all, they recall that the world struggle is a struggle between liberal democracy and Nazi And they predict there is no surer way of procuring an eventual victory for tyranny than by gathering to ourselves the assets of all the rest of the world, and preparing such post-war economic chaos as will inevitably produce the gravest social conse-Their reasoning is at least worth careful consideration.

TO ANDERSON AND BACK It was a good ride and a good day, driving to Anderson, S. C., and back to Atlanta. It was cold and the air smelled good. There was wood smoke, riding the air currents, to make one's atavistic senses come alive.

The fields looked barren and cold, with the old cotton stalks dark and stiff. Here and there was cotton as yet unpicked. There were not many pickers this year. Flocks of blackbirds were dipping down into the fields and other flocks were flying across the trees, dark against the sharp blue of the sky. A few boys were out in the fields with guns, trying to scare up rabbits.

At one or two farmhouses the cold weather, long delayed, had brought on hog-killing time. The long pink and white, cleanscraped pigs and hogs were hanging from bars nailed between trees. Athens, jammed on Saturday for the Tech-Georgia game, was quiet and placid. The fraternity house decorations were a bit the hurts, emotional and physical, were healing. It was a good drive. From Louie Morris' home town of Hartwell we crossed the Louie Morris bridge into South Carolina and soon were at Anderson.

bedraggled and torn. The big game was in the record books and

THE REAL VALUES In Anderson is Wilton Hall, one of the finest and most courageous of newspaper publishers, the type which makes one proud to be a newspaperman. His vitally alive newspaper is one of the best known in his state. While others often equivocate, he speaks out. When the infamous Ku Klux Klan became emboldened to parade publicly and finally to do a kidnaping, it was his editorial voice which brought about arrests. Anderson was busy entertaining the Clemson football team, champions of South Carolina. The state has more fine rivalries than any state in the Union, and other states might observe and learn. The small and large colleges in South Carolina all are real rivals and their games are important because of this rivalry within the state.

Clemson perhaps is the most important college in the state be cause South Carolina is almost exactly half agricultural and half industrial. And Clemson is doing the job of supplying men to fit the needs of the state and of its communities. It has taken great many years but we just now are coming to see that the best education is that which fits men and women for the needs of their state.

In Georgia we just now are seeing the real value of vocational education. In an agricultural state we have seen agricultural values fall far behind industrial values because for years we did not offer any training at all in agriculture, except in college, when we knew all along that less than 17 per cent of our boys and girls were going to finish more than one year of college.

Anderson, close to Georgia and always co-operative with the Georgia city of Hartwell, its nearest Georgia neighbor, has 20 mills and yet has so retained and developed its culture and its life as to be a diversified city and by no means a mill city.

THE FIRST POWER It is a historic city from the viewpoint of one of the greatest of our utilities, electric power.

It was in Anderson that a young engineer, William C. Whitner, began to wonder why electricity could not be generated at a power dam plant and transmitted by wires to distant points to turn the wheels of factories and mills. At that time mills were built beside rivers.

He leased High shoals on Rocky river, six miles distant from Anderson. He built his plant and soon succeeded in developin and transmitting power into the city to light its street lights and operate the water works.

The first cotton mill to use electricity was operated in Anderson and soon the developement of hydroelectric power became practicable and added an incentive to the technological development of the south greater than any yet known. This was in 1894. Electricity has moved us along

South Carolina, lacking coal, has kept pace industrially because of her white coal.

It was an interesting day. Here in this section about South Carolina and Georgia, the American Revolution raged the fiercest. And near Hartwell, Nancy Hart killed the British Tories and made a name for herself. She must have been a grand old lady. She smoked a pipe, too, and not cigarets. I would like to have known

They Are Builders and Consumers Whether Brought by Storks Or Steamers

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

Our population is declining. The last census shows that we failed in this decade, for the first time in history, to maintain our usual rate of growth. The average family now consists of a fraction over three people-not enough for replacement. Our birth rate is falling.

But that is not the whole story. Having been curbed by drastic laws, immigration has almost ceased. America is no longer a refuge for the oppressed or a haven for those who love liberty. What caused the change? It is part of a process that is new in America—the process of creating plenty by means of scarcity.

It is an old theory, and in one guise or another has traveled around the globe. Snap judgment usually approves it, for man's natural selfishness gives a bias to his thinking and in time of trouble it seems reasonable to save himself by sacrificing others.

If you have a store, it is probable that your chief worry is competition. And if your competitor has some advantage, or if he seems to be taking your business, it would be quite natural for you to suppress him by law or force if you could manage it. Make business good by making stores scarcer. That is the general idea. When the food market in a coastal city was overstocked some years ago, dealers dumped many scow loads of fruit and vegetables sea. Thus they created an artificial scarcity prices high. (There is never a real surplus in America, Our kind of surplus means a greater quantity than can be consumed by those who have the price.) That plan, with variations, was adopted by the government. The farmers were saved by limiting crop acreage and killing little pigs. (It seems to work nicely if you forget the ever-increasing debt.) Labor liked the idea, too, and the workers were wholly con-vinced when their leaders said; "We have protected our jobs by making apprentices scarce; now we must stop immigration. Jobs will be more plentiful if there is a scarcity of workers. The argument sounded good, but it overlooked the fact that workers are also customers and consumers. If scarcity of people could make jobs, thinly populated regions would have no unemployment and the country with the most people would be the most un-

But the records show that we have prospered most when immigration was heaviest, and we'll be wise to let down the bars for the world's fittest when peace comes again. The process that made us great should work again, for the rules haven't changed.

I didn't have the pleasure of Shelley's acquaintance cept in books, but I can see Mr. Hicky warming his rear facade in front of an open fire and remark-ing that it's cold enough outdoors to freeze the horns off a brass goat —and then musing upon about seven stanzas regarding and appertaining to the joys and beauties of the frost upon the mountain tops and the dim blue haze of the skies at dawning—and sometimes Jack does stay up until dawn.

But I'm no poet. Time was when I went hunting rabbits in the snow. And Kenneth Rogers relates to me the delights of getting up long be-fore daylight and getting into a blind and watching for fool ducks to take a stop-over on their way south so he can shoot 'em. And getting one duck.

Personally, I do not view the approach of winter with enthus-I realize that down here in the Sunny South we do not have to hew our way through 20-foot snowdrifts to the barn, where the lowing kine await their breakfast food, for which they will swap gallons of grade-A milk.

Mercury Drop Of 20 Degrees Chills South

Temperature Falls to Two Below in Burlington, Vermont.

Temperature drops of more than 20 degrees heralded the arrival of new cold waves in the southeast and northeast yesterday. Even more frigid weather prevailed in the Dakotas, and snow powdered the northern border states from Montana across the Great Lakes.

The plummeting mercury re-corded 28 at Knoxville, 39 at Mobile, 30 at Birmingham, 34 at Montgomery and 39 at Macon. Compared with readings 24 hours earlier these temperatures were lower, respectively, by 19 degrees, 28 degrees, 21 degrees, 12 degrees, 14 degrees and 8 degrees. The cold was expected to continue today.

At Burlington, Vt., the mercury plunged to 2 below zero, 24 degrees lower than the day before.
At Syracuse it was only 5 above, or 23 degrees colder. Other low readings in that area included 16 at Boston and 21 at New York at Boston and 21 at New York city.

Temperatures in North Dakota ranged from zero to 18 below at Devil's Lake. Fargo had a minimum of 4 below and Williston of 6 below. In South Dakota the mercury was only five or 10 degrees higher.

Here Is How Atlantans Look At Optimists

Better Think Up Definition Before Leaving Home Today.

By CAROLYN McKENZIE. An optimist is-well, whatta you

All over the country this week, Mr. and Mrs. North America are being tapped on the shoulder by men with broad grins, warm handshakes, and huge buttons hanging from their coat pockets. It's National Optimists' Week, sponsored by the Optimist Clubs, and, if you don't have a definition for an optimist, then you better think of one before you get on the streets this morning.

We greeted many persons yes-terday with a camera and an in-quisitive mind. We met the men on the street, the shoppers, the tramps, the policemen, the white collar executives. Many of them returned our smiles for they are optimists. Others shrugged and shied away.

They gave all sorts of defini-tions; but, to us, the cream came from a white-haired shopper who, as she bought her stationery, told us that yesterday was her 74th birthday and that she still thought she'd 'live to see Hitler destroy-ed." She's Mrs. V. J. Ward, of 598 Moreland avenue, N. E., and a more jovial, optimistic Atlantan doesn't exist.

Lineman E. L. Strickler, of Mableton, gave us another human answer as his definition. To him an optimist is a person who thinks he can "buy a nice little home and pay for it in 10 years."

Roy Harwell, of 1095 Oglethorpe avenue, S. W., says an "old maid who expects to get married before this leap year expires" is an optimist. Guy C. Brooks, salesman, 129 Warren, S. E., says he is "a fellow who makes it possible for a pessimist to have a job." Luke Arnold, traffic court judge-elect, says his idea of an optimist is "a bachelor who won't get married because he might make the same mistake once.'

"One who thinks the worst can't be as bad as it is," is an optimist to Mrs. Nell Ingersoll, of 827 Blue Ridge court, N. E., who also has another idea: "One who believes that tomorrow will be better than today even if today is pay day." Her husband, Dorr Ingersoll, an artist, says:

"An after-dinner speaker who thinks a warmed-over story will warm up an audience."

Girl, 18, Refused Dates

By Caroline Chatfield

In the next generation there won't be any parents so ignorant important duties parents owe their girl children: namely, to encourgether as friends so that they pass naturally from playmate stage to girl and boy stage. In the meanime there are a lot of unhappy teen-and-20-age girls who must pay for their parents' ignorance or stubborness or selfishness, what-

Only yesterday I heard a mother tell a friend that her husband couldn't be bothered with Friday night games at their home and consequently this was one pleasure her daughter had to forego. She was unaware that she and her husband were sowing seeds from which they would reap a bitter harvest. Those parents wouldn't have deprived their daughter of any-thing they thought essential to her happiness. They were just dumb. And here's a tale about another dumb pair:

Dear Miss Chatfield: I'm 19 years old and have never had a date. My parents wouldn't let the boys come to our house until I was 18 and then they didn't ask to come. All my girl friends have dates, go to the movies and to dances and have parties every week but I'm left out. Is there anything I can do or must I cry myself to sleep every night as I do now. I'm not hard to look at

Answer: Your parents did you a big injustice but they will never recognize this, much less admit it. They should come to your rescue but they won't do this either. So you'll have to dry your tears, make some plans and carry them out. rirst: Why don't you ask one of your friends to arrange a double date for you? I know two girls who got husbands out of double dates. Love at first sight; short engagements: Up to present writing marriages essful. Don't set your sites that high, however.

Second: After the double date (if all goes smoothly) ask the othor if your parents object to that you can have a late snack after a movie, all going into the kitchen to cook up the food and fun. If mother won't hear to this plan take your party elsewhere. So long as you treat your parents respectfully you are within your rights when you step out to have some clean fun. Third: Gaiety is one of the most attractive qualities a girl can have. At the moment you are feeling sorry for yourself and unless you snap out of the self-pity you won't be able to make the most of your new opportunities.

Little link sausages are a popular breakfast meat but their goodness, much as it is appreciated at the first meal of the day, should not be confined to breakfast only. Wouldn't a platterful of pork links surrounded by candied orange slices make a pretty luncheon treat? Prepare it this way:

MY DAY:

Trying To Help Prisoners of War By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Sunday.-Yesterday morning I enjoyed the most beautiful exhibition in the Labor Department auditorium. This is the main one in Washington, D. C., put on for Art Week. It features not only arts and crafts, made by District of Columbia artists, but contributions from all over the country. There are other exhibitions dotted all around the city. In the Procurement Division of Fine Arts there is a delightful collection of water colors. I wish I could have seen them all. In the meantime, I bought a number of things which exemplify the variety of exhibits. I was interested to have Dr. Ed Rowan, who is responsible for the hanging of this exhibition, tell me that the names of the artists showed, as they did in Chicago, the great variety of races which make up our cultural background and which have contributed to the development of our civilization. On Friday evening, Mr. Jerome Davis, who has been appointed the Y. M. C. A. to take charge of their program in connection with prison and concentration camps in Canada, told us a little of what this work means. It is not only a humanitarian effort to make the lives of men who live within barbed-wire entanglements a trifle more human, but contributes greatly to the willingness on the part of the Axis nations to allow Y. M. C. A. representatives to do similar work in Germany. There are some 2,000,000 persons in prison in concentration camps in Germany as against a few hundred thousand in Canada. If good work is done in Canada, it gives an opportunity to the representatives serving in Germany to ask for the same type of work to be done in camps in Germany. It is curious that Mr. Davis, who served in this same capacity during the World War, should find himself confronted with the same problems and be again devoting his life to the same type of

Ambulant Treatment Is Modern Method

A little more than 10 years ago this column contained a premilinary article on the injection treatment of hernia. In the article I said I was not yet entirely convinced of the efficacy of the method, but if on further study it proved as good as it seemed to me then I'd be eager to acquaint the public with it. About 10 months later I began urging the ambulant or injection treatment of hernia as the method of choice for anyone with hernia, if the method were applicable in the particular

Shortly after that began the campaign of the little clique of medical politicians who have control of medical organization in this country to discredit me and my teachings.

In spite of such small-minded impropaganda the ambulant or injection method has grown steadily in popularity and is today not only theoretically but actually the method of choice in most cases of hernia coming under treatment.

The ambulant method is so called because the patient under treatment remains ambulant, walking about, without interruption in his usual occupation, throughout. The injections, in the hands of a physician skilled in the technique-and not every doctor who undertakes to treat hernia by injection is properly qualified by instruction under a master of the method—are practically painless; at least most patients complain little or not at all of the discomfort of the treatment. From a half dozen to a dozen or more treatments may be required—all in the doctor's office at intervals of a week or so.

The method is not a sure cure. Failure follows in nearly as many cases as in the radical operation for hernia. But if the injections fail to bring about cure, a second course later on may prove successful, and in any case there is no bar to further treatment either by injection or by surgery, if the patient so elects.

The radical operation for hernia has its own mortality rate. No denying that. The injection treatment for hernia has no mortality.
A reader sends a letter signed by an executive of a great life insurance company which, evidently, is a carrier of accident and health insurance as well. In the letter the executive announces liberalization of the company's atti-tude in respect to injection treatment of hernia, which will hereafter be considered on the same basis with operation for hernia, in payment of insurance claims.

On the whole the modern treatment of hernia has done well enough these past 10 years. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Prominent Memphis Belle To Arrive Today for Visit

By Sally Forth.

 REMEMBER the story three years ago concerning the Mem-phis debut season which revolved around only one girl? The girl was beautiful Adaline Heiskell, who received much publicity as the "lone deb" of Memphis. The lovely young belle enjoyed a whirl of social affairs, and Memphis hosstesses, it seems, tried to outdo hemselves in entertaining for her.

Now comes good news for Atlanta, for Adaline is scheduled to arrive this morning to visit Charlotte Sage at her home on Inman circle. There will be a number of informal parties for the visitor during her stay, one of which will be the luncheon to be given tomorrow by Charlotte when she entertains for Dorothy Sanford, bride-to-be of Ralph Boynton.

The reason the Memphis belle cannot make a very long visit with Charlotte is that she is busy with nouncement that Randy and Catherine Campbell Hearst and arrangements for a black and white ball. The ball takes place on December 26 at the fashionable University Club in Memphis and will be sponsored by present and post-debutantes of the Tennessee city. The latter group will wear formal black gowns and the current debutantes will don white to carry out the theme of the ball, preparations for which will cut short Adaline's visit to Charlotte.

. . . THAT ATTRACTIVE pair, "Chuck" a nd Betty Dutton Hunt, returned last week from a five weeks' trip to Florida, and their host of friends will be delighted to hear that Betty bears no trace of her re-cent long illness. It was justa 2 year ago that the popular young matron was taken with the illness that lasted eight months and caused her family and friends grave concern.

Betty and "Chuck" combined business with pleasure on the Florida trip, and managed to spend each weekend at one of the popular resorts. They were extensively entertained during their stay in Miami—a visit made all the more enjoyable because of Betty's return to glowing health.

At an early date the Hunts will establish residence in Griffin, where they have taken an apartment on South Hill street. Though the apartment is small, its big, old-fashioned rooms and high ceilings delight Betty, who plans to furnish it with the lovely antiques she has collected since her marriage 18 months ago.

predicts that her beauty and charm will assure her an unusually cordial reception in social circles here.

Randy and Catherine need no introduction to Atlanta society, having sold their beautiful home on Pace's Ferry road to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Seydel last winter to establish residence in the fashionable suburb of Burlingame. Needless to say the visitors will be admired figures attending the Christmas festivities here.

Junior League To Meet Today

The feature of the December meeting of the Atlanta Junior League which will be held today at 3 o'clock at the Piedmont Driving Club will be a talk by R. G. Danner, special agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investiga-tion in Atlanta. Mr. Danner will speak on the FBI program of pre-

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene, The dark, unfathomed caves of ocean bear; Full many a flower is born to blush unseen And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

There was the time, in 1934, for instance, when the Atlanta Crackers signed Kirby Higbe. Chick Galloway, baseball coach at Presbyterian College and formerly a member of the Cracker Kid team of

'19, brought Highe to Atlanta. He had spotted him pitching for a South Carolina semi-pro team. Higbe didn't exactly waste his sweetness on the desert air here. Spencer Abbott signed him in '34 and Eddie Moore was manager in '35. The Crackers had a great pitching staff in '35 and there was no room for the raw, gangling rookie

So Highe was sent to Portsmouth, Va., without being given much of chance. The Crackers did not exercise the right of option and Highe, after two years with Portsmouth, went on to Chicago. He wasted his sweetness on the desert air there. So off to Birmingham went Kirby Higbe, and he was never a great pitcher in the Southern league. Strangely enough, Highe did not come into his own until he joined, of all people, the Phainting Phillies of Philadelphia.

Under genial Doc Prothro, Highe blossomed into a star, gained recognition right and left with a hopelessly tail-end

And you will recall, of course, that not so very long ago Larry MacPhail, general manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, gave $75,000 and three ball players for Higbe. Gabby Hartnett Signs As Coach With Giants

Bill Killefer To Manage Milwaukee; Tony Cuccinello To Pilot Jersey City Club.

By JOHN MARTIN.

The majors took the play away from the minors here yesterday and started pitching curves in a chilly wind that would have kept less hard hitten dealers under words. less hard-bitten dealers under wraps.

Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, was the first to unlimber. Instead of a creaky right arm though, he unloosed his brief case and dropped out a contract for Leo (Gabby) Hartnett, eased-out manager of the Cubs.

Hartnett has been signed to work as player-coach for the

The signing of Hartnett, although not a big surprise, was the highlight of yesterday's preliminaries to the 39th annual convention of the minors which offi-cially opens for three days Wed-nesday. He was the third nesday. He was the third veteran figuring in deals. The Milan figuring in deals. "I read the letter you had in your column Saturday, November 30, the day of the Tech-Georgia game, and, like you said, it appeared that the Univ. of Georgia students who wrote it were sure of a Georgia victory. Well, as we all know, they were right about that, but I would like to have seen their faces at the end of the first half, "I am a Tech supporter, and naturally I was downcast at the result of the game, but I didn't cry or pull my hair about it. After all, it was just another football game. "When the four boys that wrote the letter to you go back to their studies, if they study about insects, I hope they won't have as much trouble when they reach the Yellow Jackets as their team did. "I am writing this letter to you because I feel that you feel the same way as I do about the game.

"I had the pleasure of having you speak to my civics class at Bass Jr. High school once, and I enjoy your columns in the paper he can accept a defeat with a fine philosophic attitude and as much as I did your talk. "Sincerely, "GENE HODGES JR."

What Stocks Did.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 .- (AP)-An early rising trend in the stock market today flattened out as the session proceeded and at the last prices turned slightly irregular. made the list look fairly good for a while, but momentum soon faded along with quotations. sues was unchanged at 44.

Principal handicaps to the advance, brokers suggested, included thoughts of a jump in corporation taxes next year, the belief considerable year-end selling for income tax adjustments still had to be abtion regarding the amount of un-sold British-owned American securities overhanging the market. War news did not seem particularly disturbing.

On the bullish side was the continuance of roseate business and industrial prospects. A case in point here was the official esti-mate putting this week's steel mill operations at 96.9 per cent of capacity, up .3 of a point from the week before at a new peak for this industry.

stocks never did get going and the majority finished under water. Sluggishness of engine production was said to have put a brake on this group. Utilities did better than usual, as it was realized some of these stocks had recently hit new 1940 lows and were selling on a substantial high-yield basis.

Among scattered curb gainers were Master Electric, American Gas, Borne Scrymser, Bath Iron Works and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Declines were registered for Cities Service, Electric Bond & Share Bell Aircraft, Brewster Aero, Gulf Oil and Humble Oil.

Cannon Mills' Directors Vote 50-Cent Dividend NEW YORK, Dec. 2.-(AP)-Dipany, cloth makers, today de-clared a dividend of 50 cents a common share, payable December 30 to holders of record December 14. The disbursement will lower 1940 payments to $2 a share from and South Carolina.

A Story of the American White-Collar Girl

SYNOPSIS.

Introducing Kitty Foyle, all-American white-collar girl as she was in the making. This is her story, told by herself as she looks backward to when, as a child she sets the stage of her life on what was definitely the wrong side of Philadelphia's railroad tracks. Even then she had the imagination of her London-derry father, some of his humor and all of his sentiment. She had a good dash of her Pennselvania-Dutch mother's stubborn courage, too. A realist at 10, she was a dreamer, too, she begins to know "what it is all about" even as she prepares herself to meet the world, a man's world in which she knows there is no quarter. Not that she would ask for any. Her included the world of the world of the world of the world of the world. And now, Kitty Foyle talking.

Out of the steam of the wash-tubs Myrtle said: "Shape'll come. Dey bulges here and dey bulges dere, all of a sudden dey's real

This didn't mean anything to me but it sounded hopeful. One day I found Pop waiting outside when school let out. Kids dislike their parents to step out of routine and also I was sensitive about the old man being so crippled up and walking on a stick. I wondered what the devil he was staring at us for. He explained, he was looking to see what kind of clothes the other girls wore so he could pick something special for me. Bless his old heart! It must have been then he got the plaid dress I was so proud of. I think that was Myr-McTaggart and me cutting out pa-per dolls and discussing their cosumes. Myrtle was proud of the figured that Irish, like colored people, were sort of on their own, secretly at odds with the root. When he learned it was respected to be taken by surprise. He hunted to be taken by surprise. He hunted to be taken by surprise. He hunted to be taken by surprise. He hated to be taken by surprise.

When you're a kid it's a big help to have someone really proud of you and show it. That was Myrtle.
Things I wouldn't have thought much about come back now be-cause that old colored woman made a fuss about them. After Mother died Myrtle came more often and she certainly kept us up to the mark. There was Pop's walking stick with the silver handle and an inscription from the Frankford Cricket Club, she always kept it polished. "Let be that cane," she shouted at Lena and me when we wanted to use one that was pretty good for any and me when we wanted to use one that was pretty good for any that was pretty good for any that the cane, that was pretty good for any that was pretty good for any that the cane. and me when we wanted to use it in some game we were playing. I knew where he kept it; it was his bottle of Vat 69.

He was pretty well crippled with arthritis. Every time I'd hear the old wicker chair creak as he shifted he'd mutter Oh Judaspriest. Mac learned from the doctor how to ease him the way a trained nurse does. Mac would stand with his feet braced against Pop's and hold out both hands.

The old man would grab them when he found we lived just and Mac would swing him up; round the corner from Orthodox they'd sway together like they street. That's in Frankford, and a long way from the main line, if you know what that means in Philly. It's freight trains and coal yards and factories and the smell of the tanneries down by Frankford creek. The fact they were long a long way together like they were wrestling, poor old Pop growling with pain. There was never any need to worry about my learning bad words at school, I picked them all up listening to the old man in his rheumatism spells. Then Mac would ease him down into the chair again and pop would take another shot of building an L out our way was hootch which was probably the the nets, and Pop telling them what to comic to Wyn; it was a New York kind of thing to do, not in the hunting for some cricket news in the Ledger. "In the garbage, of all places," "Well," says Mother, he shouts.

"that's the place for old oranges."

Mother's habit of throwing ways gave him fits. There was an old sofa cushion, all tattered and faded, but he used it for years to put in his lap when he was reading. His rheumatism made it hard His rheumatism made it hard to hold up a book or newspaper so he laid it on the pillow in his I guess this particular cushion just suited him, or he'd got fond of it. Come to think about it, maybe the real difference between him and mother was, he was the kind of person who likes things when they're old. That dirty pillow was a great comfort cided it wasn't worth mending again and threw it out. She never learned you could do anything with the old man if you prepared him for it beforehand; he hated secretly at odds with the rest of pected another explosion. DRAMA-"The Mystery of Travis Oldham," a stirring drama with a mixture of murder—or at least that's what it appeared to be and romance with Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne as co-stars, is the "First Nighter's" presentation over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Les Tremayne plays the part of a star reporter while Miss Luddy heard as his sweetheart. They join to get a "scoop" on a murder story, only to discover that the "murdered" man is still alive. Then there is more trouble for the bewildered couple—trouble in the editorial room and in the "murdered" man's house. There's a full measure of excitement in the hfforts to unwind the plot of the play by Kenneth Higgins.

WE THE PEOPLE - William Prestre, who lived with a tribe of wild Chinese head-hunters; Edgar Boggs, who kissed 8,064 babies in an unsuccessful attempt to be elected sheriff of his county, and Connie Russell, "Dance Hall Cinderella," who has just been signed to appear in a movie with Mickey Rooney, will be among Gabriel Heatter's guests on "We, the Peoeple," over WGST at 8 o'clock

Mrs. Carolyn P. Lindsay, first patient of the late Doctor Edward Livingston Trudeau, will pay trib-ute to the famous physician who started the first tuberculosis sanatorium at Saranac Lake. Prestre will relate his experiences with the head-hunters in the jungle section between China and Burma. Boggs will explain that he failed to win the office of sheriff during the recent election in Cheswold county, Delaware.

COURT—Heirs to fortunes of many thousands of dollars are sought by the "Court of Missing Heirs" as it convenes for its fif-tieth Columbia network "session" over WGST at 7 o'clock tonight.

The cases dramatized on the program are taken from the files

Army Tranfers Major to Texas

Major Sam L. Ellis, for the past 18 months in command of the Fourth Corps Area Air Corps detachment, with headquarters at Candler field, was assigned to San Antonio, Texas, in army orders made public yesterday in Washington.

It was understood that Lieutenant Colonel Chris Ford, now on duty in Cleveland, Ohio, will succeed him here.

Major Ellis, an active army flyer since 1917, is a native of Knoxville, Tenn. The date for his departure will be fixed later.
